Scene: A Busy City Street - Day

Setting: A bustling city street filled with people rushing about. There's a small park in the middle with a fountain. The camera pans over the scene, capturing the energy of the city.

- INT. CITY STREET - DAY

We see JASON, mid-20s, charming but slightly disheveled, walking briskly with a large cup of coffee in one hand and his phone in the other. He's clearly late for something, checking his watch with a worried expression.

JASON br/>(muttering to himself) br/>Come on, Jason, you can't be late again. This job interview is your last chance...

Suddenly, a gust of wind blows through the street, knocking over a nearby street vendor's display of colorful balloons. Balloons start floating everywhere, causing a minor commotion.

Enter LUCY, early 20s, vibrant and full of life, who is trying to catch one of the balloons that has her dog's name on it. She's laughing as she chases it, dodging people.

LUCY br/>(yelling playfully) br/>Come back here, Mr. Whiskers!

In the chaos, Jason, distracted by his phone, doesn't see Lucy running towards him. They collide spectacularly; Jason's coffee splashes all over him, and Lucy falls backward, but Jason instinctively catches her.

JASON br/>(surprised, holding Lucy in his arms) br/>Whoa! Are you okay?

LUCY br/>(laughing, still in his arms) br/>I think so! But Mr. Whiskers is getting away!

Jason looks confused, then notices the balloon floating away.

JASON br/>(smiling, helping her up) br/>Mr. Whiskers? Is that your dog or...?

LUCY br/>(pointing at the balloon) br/>My dog's balloon! He's very particular about his balloons.

Jason, still holding Lucy's hand, looks at the balloon and then at Lucy. A moment of connection passes between them.

JASON br/>(playfully) br/>Well, we can't let Mr. Whiskers down, can we?

They both start chasing the balloon together, weaving through the crowd, laughing. The camera captures their playful chase, their chemistry evident.

Finally, they corner the balloon near the fountain. Lucy catches it triumphantly.

LUCY br/>(breathing heavily, smiling) br/>Gotcha! Thank you, my hero.

JASON br/>(chuckling, looking at his coffee-stained shirt) br/>I think I'm the one who needs saving here.

They both laugh, and Lucy notices Jason's predicament.

LUCY br/>(concerned) br/>Oh no, your shirt! Here, let me help.

She grabs a napkin from her bag and starts dabbing at his shirt, but it only makes it worse. They share a look, and the awkwardness turns into shared amusement.

JASON br/>(jokingly) br/>You know, this is usually how my dates start, but without the coffee.

LUCY br/>(playfully) br/>Is that your way of asking me out?

JASON br/>(grinning) br/>Maybe it is. How about I buy you a coffee to replace the one I wore?

LUCY br/>(smiling, holding the balloon) br/>Only if Mr. Whiskers can come too.

They share a laugh, and the camera zooms out as they walk towards a nearby coffee shop, the balloon floating beside them.
